Secretary Dickinson had talked the pier situation over with Senator Root, who when Secretary of War had given the pier line problem a great deal of consideration. Senator Root, the commissioners learned while in Washington, hopes that a comprehensive plan for harbor improvement will be worked out by New York and New Jersey and the United States Government, and the Senator was in favor of temporary long piers until some definite system had been evolved. The step that Gov. Dix took in appointing a commission to work in Secretary Dickinson had talked the in appointing a commission to work in cooperation with a New Jersey commission and a War Department board had its effect with the Secretary of War in the determination he reached on Monday, so the commissioners said yesterday it was learned yesterday that the Cunard
